LANCASTER, O., Feb. 12.—Ethel Francis, 17-year-old high school student who lapsed into unconsciousness four days ago from a strange malady which physicians called a "person sleep" was out of danger today.

The girl collapsed during revival services in the Church of Christ at Christian Union last Thursday. A quantity of fluid from her spinal column yesterday to determine whether the patient was suffering with spinal meningitis, the girl regained her senses. She was the worst, apparently, from her four day "death-like" sleep.

Many Problems Solved By Mrs. Patton In Work

Saturday, Feb. 9, was the last day that Mrs. Carrie Patton acted as probation officer and her leaving that position is cause for regret. For the past 11 years she has served ably and conscientiously in this capacity. Since her appointment 11 years ago by Judge Brown, she has attended to cases that have come before the probate court. Her work in the court room, however, was only a part of her duties.

Hundreds and hundreds of cases she investigated, and working in accordance with the rules laid down for such officers, she kept as many cases as possible out of court. At the same time it took time and hard work to iron out such affairs, satisfactorily. In this, her efforts were tireless.

Mrs. Patton also had charge of accompanying girls to Delaware and many other unpleasant duties that only she will ever know. Another duty was the taking care of children, and sometimes babies, whose parents were up for trial in court, and for whom no arrangements had been made. Her residence on W. Mound-st., was used as a detention home many times.

CINCINNATI, O., Feb. 12.—The death of Bishop Theodore S. Henderson, 61, bishop of the Ohio area of the Methodist Episcopal church, was mourned throughout the state today.

Active until the last, Bishop Henderson's last wishes were "Go ahead with the plans I have made." This message was addressed to 1109 clergymen under his jurisdiction in the Cincinnati area, which embraces the territory in Ohio and Kentucky.

Bishop Henderson was to have been one of the principal speakers at the inaugural of next Thursday of Dr. Edward L. Snider as president of Ohio Wesleyan university.

Members of the family were with the bishop when his death occurred. Although many of his friends knew of his illness his death was unexpected.

Local Prisoners Fed Better Than Army, Is Claim

Prisoners in the Pickaway county jail are among the best fed in the state and fare better than soldiers in their diet, according to County Auditor Bryce Briggs, who pointed out Tuesday that 50 dozen eggs were eaten by Sheriff Davis' boarders during the month of January. Auditor Briggs said he served 21 months in the army and never saw an egg.

That the county prisoners get variety as well as quality and quantity is shown by a glance at last month's grocery bill, which totaled $200.71. Eggs said Vegetables served at the jail included peas, tomatoes, corn, beans, cabbage. Breakfast foods of a variety of brands, was provided. 36 cans of peaches were served for dessert. Other items include milk, hominy and meat.

OHIO MINERS PLAN STRIKE

Coal Diggers Will Try To Re-organize Union To Fight Owners.

CAMBRIDGE, O., Feb. 12.—Plans are effective today for a renewal, April 1, of the mine strike that put 35,000 Ohio miners out of work and led the men losing their organization in this state, according to predictions following announcement of the appointment of David Fowler, International organizer, to take charge of Ohio mines and try and rebuild the union which foundered on the rocks of the Jacksonville agreement.

It was announced here that John L. Lewis, international president of the mine union, has designated Fowler to try to again unionize the state by persuading men working in Guernsey valley mines and elsewhere to join the organization.

It is proposed to issue cards to those willing to join the United Mine Workers of America. Instead of the usual assessments and dues, formerly held out of the miners' pay envelope by the companies on request of the union, $1 a month will be charged, stamps of that value being sold to those joining and these are to be placed on the union cards.

If the plan is at all successful, a determined effort to bring about a walkout April 1, seems assured. Two years ago-April 1, 1927-saw the start of the strike that cost Ohio miners support of their union in dues. After months of idleness, several mines resumed with imported workers and gradually, home men went back to work. Other mines resumed at intervals throughout the year following the first break in which was formerly a solid union state. Today it is claimed the Ohio district organization does not have a single really large mine operating under a union scale.

COOPER ENDS BATTLE OVER REPEAL BILL

Governor's Suggestions Bring Peace To Senate Committee.

COLUMBUS, O., Feb. 12.—Gov. Arthur Y. Cooper, assaying the role of "peacemaker" today had brought to an end the senate fight over the Carpenter Bill, which seeks the repeal of the Peace law.

Hitherto the senate committee on public utilities had been split into two irreconcilable groups over the proposed measure.

The Carpenter bill originally sought to create within the state department of commerce a bureau of investigation, which would be headed by a superintendent appointed by the director of commerce. To this bureau would be referred for investigation all applications for increase or decrease in rates, which are now filed with the utilities commission. The commission would then act as a judicial body and decide the cases on the basis of facts submitted by the bureau.

REPEAL FAVORED

The senate committee, as a whole, favored the repeal of the Peace law, but could not agree that the employees of the commission should be placed under authority of the superintendent of the bureau. A difference of opinion, also existed as to whether the director of commerce or the members of the commission should have the authority to appoint the superintendent of the bureau.

Gov. Cooper by offering an amendment to the bill is believed to have brought the hotly contested fight within the committee to an end. At the same time settled the two factions.

With the chief executive's amendment, the bill would read as follows:

BILL'S PROVISIONS

- 1.—Repeal of the Peace law, under which utilities may collect rate increases before they are allowed by the commission.
- 2.—Creation of a bureau of investigation, which would be headed by a superintendent appointed by the state utilities commission.
- 3.—That all rate cases should be investigated by the newly created bureau.
- 4.—The commission should decide cases upon the basis of facts submitted by this bureau.
- 5.—The commission itself is to appoint and have jurisdiction over the attorney examiners, engineers, accountants and other investigation experts.

GRAIN GRADES TO BE SHOWN

Federal Expert Will Give Demonstration at Annual Meeting Here.

William Ingles, federal grain supervisor, U. S. bureau of markets, Cincinnati, will give a grain grading demonstration at the annual meeting of the Pickaway Grain Co. at 1:30 p. m. Wednesday in the Farm Bureau home.

Obtaining of Mr. Ingles to attend the meeting is considered an achievement on the part of H. S. Lewis county agent, because the federal supervisor seldom attends any but the larger agricultural meetings. His engagement here was obtained only after he obtained special permission from general field headquarters of the bureau of markets at Chicago to leave his post at Cincinnati.

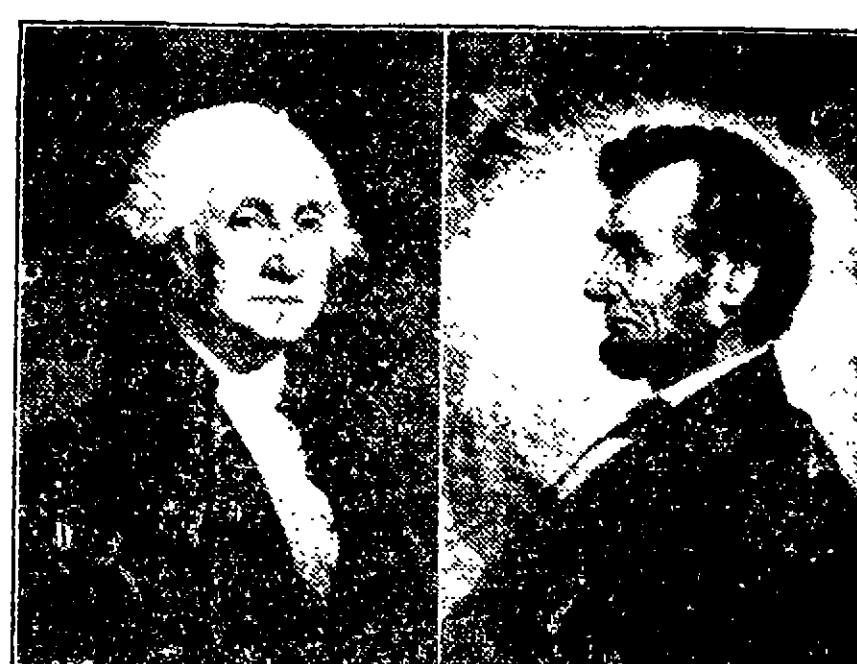

Mr. Ingles will demonstrate what comprises the commercial grades of wheat, corn and oats at the meeting Wednesday afternoon.

L. G. Foster, of the rural economics department of Ohio State university, who was associated with co-operative elevators in Wisconsin for 10 years, will address the meeting on "Duties of the nation, Management and Directors in Successful Elevator Operation."

The reading of annual reports will occupy the remainder of time of the gathering.

CHILLICOTHE, O., Feb. 12.—Ground was broken Monday for a new hospital unit and laundry at the U. S. Veterans' Hospital, north of this city. The hospital unit will provide for 130 additional beds.

Men For the Ages

President, The Metropolitan Casualty Insurance Company of New York

In February we celebrate the birth anniversaries of two men unique in history, whose fame is the fairest heritage that any nation ever boasted.

Heroes there have been aplenty, conquerors who "sailed through slaughter to a throne," but what other country has fathered two such sons as Washington and Lincoln, so universal in their humanity, so merciful in their victories that, passing all barriers of race or language, their names are revered to the outmost limits of civilization!

America is often charged with seeking material progress at the expense of spiritual values, but a country which in a late century and a half of national life can produce a Washington and a Lincoln, though it may have its feet on the earth, surely has its eyes turned toward the stars! Born at social extremes, Washington, son of proud colonial aristocrats, nurtured in the imported luxuries of the old world—Lincoln, child of humble pioneers, toiling in primitive bareness and hardship—from such dissimilar beginnings both found inspiration to develop unsurpassed grandeur of character.

Unspoiled by wealth, undeterred by poverty, such was their inherent genius that at the call of country, in the darkest hours that any nation ever endured and survived, each rose to matchless leadership, armored invincibly in a singleness of purpose that "knew no glory but their country's good."

Washington, wise and unselfish commander of a tattered citizen soldiery, whose victory from the second of legends of Europe under discouragements that would have crushed any man of indomitable spirit, but which only completed his triumph. It was the presence of such a character as Washington at the head of the new government that insured its success in a hostile world.

Lincoln, even in his poverty-stricken beginnings in the law, refused cases whose justice he doubted, developing a humorous tolerance that became proverbial, "his heart was great as the world but with no room in it to hold the memory of a wrong," wiping out at last the virulence of private hate by martyrdom.

With a passionate love of right, a burning hate of wrong, both brought to their immense tasks no illusions of greatness but to the last were humbly unconcerned of their fitness for such leadership. Indeed, both were "educated into greatness" by the weight of their burdens and by the purity of motive by which they were guided.

Largely because of the selfless genius of Washington and Lincoln we survive today, a strong nation, undivided and respected. Happy the country whose history records such lives! Fortunate the posterity whose lives may rise to the inspiration of such examples!

Increase or Abolishment of Movie Censorship is Before Ohio Senate

Old-fashioned Fight Expected In Committee Over Two Bills.

COLUMBUS, O., Feb. 12.—A good, old-fashioned "fight" is expected when the education committee of the Ohio Senate goes into session here tonight.

It will be the task of the committee to pass on the bill, introduced by Senator David B. Johnson, Wauseon, which provides for the censorship of "talkie" movies.

This in itself would not provoke a disturbance if it were not for another bill, sponsored by Senator George H. Bender, Cleveland, which seeks to abolish motion picture censorship in Ohio.

Though this second measure does not come up before the committee tonight, Bender is a member of the committee, and like all good legislators, will support his measure as only Senator Bender knows how.

On the other hand, Senator Johnson is chairman of the same committee and he also will have his "little piece" to reiterate.

The Wausen Senator points to the ever increasing popularity of the vitaphone as a reason for his bill.

Senator Johnson's measure is a terse statement, consisting of about 10 words, and seeks to provide that motion picture censorship shall be abolished.

But when he pleads for the repeal of the bill, he also pleads that the Censorship law was enacted when the country was in a state of panic and that it has since become obsolete.

The Senator always has a ready answer to the question of the difference in substance between the censorship law and the vitaphone. He provides that the censorship of motion pictures shall be maintained.

The board of film censorship, which has jurisdiction over the censorship of spoken lines, shall be abolished through the proposed amendment or election of a board, and which form a part of the motion picture drama.

The board of film censorship operates under the department of education. The director of education is the nominal head, John

SAYS NOBLES BACK MEXICAN REVOLT PLOTS

Government Plans Confiscation of Instigator's Property.

MEXICO CITY, Feb. 12.—President Emilio Portes Gil today struck back at the enemies of his government in a scathing, signed statement which is considered one of the most important political documents issued since he assumed the presidency.

Coming close upon the heels of the attempt to assassinate him and members of his family by dynamiting his special train Sunday night, President Portes Gil's statement declares that the real enemies of his regime are not to be found in the church, but are members of Mexico's one-time aristocracy, disinherited by the revolution, who are using the religious conflict as a cloak for their subversive activities.

The present political unrest in Mexico is wholly apart from the difficulties resulting from the church-state conflict, the president declared.

CONFISCATION AHEAD

The statement outlined the stern measures with which the government is prepared to put an end to politically subversive movements. These measures include the confiscation of the property of those convicted of plotting against the government, and the division of that property among the working classes.

Importance is added to the president's statement, as he is presumed to have discussed with the United States ambassador, Dwight W. Morrow, the right measures contemplated by the government.

"The steps taken by the government," the president's statement sets forth, "shows its complete separation from the religious question, and its respect for the freedom of conscience have only served to exalt the spirits of those who exploit the credulity of the Catholic masses for political purposes, and to give occasion for these masses and their leaders to take sides in favor of crime, which the country condemned and to glorify the criminal."

DENIES PERSECUTION

"Firstly, the government declares that it cannot admit that the conduct of the Catholics results from religious persecution by the government."

"In accordance with the program of the previous government, the restrictive measures had been gradually diminished by the present government until now only church services are under suspension, and it is well known that this suspension has not been ordered by the civil authorities. Nothing now exists to show that the conflict in which the executive offices of the government once played a part still continues."

"The hidden instigators of all the excesses, which we lament, are not even sincere Catholics defending the religion of their ancestors. They are bourgeoisie who hold existing conditions responsible for their actions, and seek a way to recover those privileges which the Mexican revolution took away from them."

PLOTTERS SOUGHT

"Indubitable proofs of this are contained in the murders of peasants which, to add sarcasm to the crime, are carried out in the name of 'Christ our king,' and also in the decided protection extended by the pseudo-Mexican aristocracy to the Catholic rebels."

"The government believes that economic pressure will be more effective. Above the arm we must look for the brain, and in applying civil action, the government will seize the properties of those who are authors or accomplices, and thus will have the means further to carry on its revolutionary work of building over new ranches to the peasants, and giving to the workers the factories of those traitors."

"In this way the president will see that the seizures are made with complete rectitude in order to avoid the possibility of frauds or the protection of powerful enemies."

"The government wishes also to state that there will not be a single instance in which influence, or money, or friendship will hinder the strict enforcement of the law."

MOTHER IS FINED

COLUMBUS, Feb. 12.—Pleading lack of charges of legal possession of liquor in her home and legal possession of implements designed for the manufacture of liquor Mrs. May Bloomfield, mother of 12 children, was fined $200 and costs by Justice A. C. Kuhn.

Mr. and Mrs. T. O. Gahland and Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Kuntz who motored to Florida, have arrived at Miami, and are staying at the Columbia Court Apartments.

The Carpenter bill originally sought to create within the state department of commerce a bureau of investigation, which would be headed by a superintendent appointed by the director of commerce. To this bureau would be referred for investigation all applications for increase or decrease in rates, which are now filed with the utilities commission. The commission would then act as a judicial body and decide the cases on the basis of facts submitted by the bureau.

REPEAL FAVORED

The senate committee, as a whole, favored the repeal of the Peace law, but could not agree that the employees of the commission should be placed under authority of the superintendent of the bureau. A difference of opinion, also existed as to whether the director of commerce or the members of the commission should have the authority to appoint the superintendent of the bureau.

Gov. Cooper by offering an amendment to the bill is believed to have brought the hotly contested fight within the committee to an end, and at the same time satisfied the two factions.

With the chief executive's amendment, the bill would read as follows:

BILL'S PROVISIONS

- 1.—Repeal of the Peace law, under which utilities may collect rate increases before they are allowed by the commission.
- 2.—Creation of a bureau of investigation, which would be headed by a superintendent appointed by the state utilities commission.
- 3.—That all rate cases should be investigated by the newly created bureau.
- 4.—The commission should decide cases upon the basis of facts submitted by this bureau.
- 5.—The commission itself is to appoint and have jurisdiction over the attorney examiners, engineers, accountants and other investigation experts.

GRAIN GRADES TO BE SHOWN

Federal Expert Will Give Demonstration at Annual Meeting Here.

William Ingles, federal grain supervisor, U. S. bureau of markets, Cincinnati, will give a grain grading demonstration at the annual meeting of the Pickaway Grain Co. at 1:30 p. m. Wednesday in the Farm Bureau home.

Obtaining of Mr. Ingles to attend the meeting is considered an achievement on the part of H. S. Lewis, county agent, because the federal supervisor seldom attends any but the larger agricultural meetings. His engagement here was obtained only after he obtained special permission from general field headquarters of the bureau of markets at Chicago to leave his post at Cincinnati.

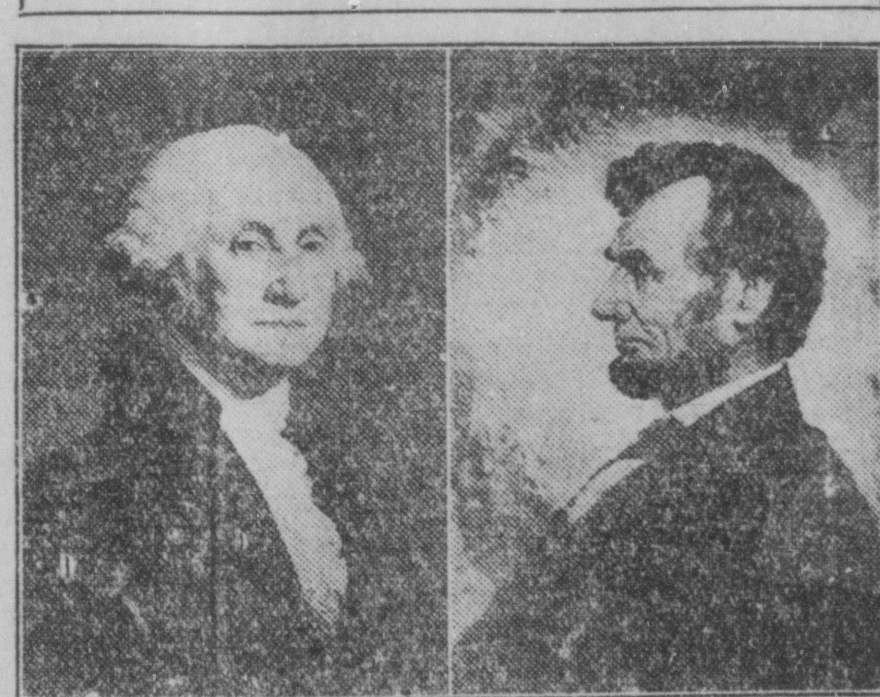

Mr. Ingles will demonstrate what comprises the commercial grades of wheat, corn and oats at the meeting Wednesday afternoon.

L. G. Foster, of the rural economics department of Ohio State university, who was associated with co-operative elevators in Wisconsin for 10 years, will address the meeting on "Duties of the patron, Management and Directors in Successful Elevator Operation."

Election of officers and the reading of annual reports will occupy the remainder of time of the gathering.

CHILLICOTHE, O., Feb. 12.—Ground was broken Monday for a new hospital unit and laundry at the U. S. Veterans' Hospital, north of this city. The hospital unit will provide for 130 additional beds.

Men For the Ages

By J. SCOTTFIELD ROWE
President, The Metropolitan Casualty Insurance Company of New York

In February we celebrate the birth anniversaries of two men unique in history, whose fame is the fairest heritage that any nation ever boasted.

Heroes there have been aplenty, conquerors who "waded through slaughter to a throne," but what other country has fathered two such sons as Washington and Lincoln, so universal in their humanity, so merciful in their victories that, passing all barriers of race or language, their names are revered to the outmost limits of civilization!

America is often charged with seeking material progress at the expense of spiritual values, but a country which in a bare century and a half of national life can produce a Washington and a Lincoln, though it may have its feet on the earth, surely has its eyes turned toward the stars!

Born at social extremes, Washington, son of proud colonial aristocrats, nurtured in the imported luxuries of the old world—Lincoln, child of humble pioneers toiling in primitive business and hardship—from such dissimilar beginnings both found inspiration to develop unsurpassed grandeur of character.

Unspoiled by wealth, undeterred by poverty, such was their inherent genius that at the call of country, in the darkest hours that any nation ever endured and survived, each rose to matchless leadership, armored invincibly in a singleness of purpose that "knew no glory but their country's good."

Washington, wise and unselfish commander of a tattered citizen soldiery, wrung victory from the seasoned legions of Europe under discouragements that would have crushed any save an indomitable spirit, but which only completed his training. It was the presence of such a character as Washington at the head of the new government that insured its success in a hostile world.

Lincoln, even in his poverty-stricken beginnings in the law, refused cases which justice he doubted, developing a humorous tolerance that became proverbial, "his heart as great as the world but with no room in it to hold the memory of a wrong," wiping out at last the virulence of private hate by martyrdom.

With a passionate love of right, a burning hate of wrong, both brought to their immense tasks no illusions of greatness but to the last were humbly unconcerned of their fitness for such leadership. Indeed, both were "educated into greatness" by the weight of their burdens and by the purity of motive by which they were guided.

Largely because of the selfless genius of Washington and Lincoln we survive today, a strong nation, undivided and respected. Happy the country whose history records such lives! Fortunate the posterity whose lines may rise to the inspiration of such examples!

Increase or Abolishment of Movie Censorship is Before Ohio Senate

Old-fashioned Fight Expected In Committee Over Two Bills.

COLUMBUS, O., Feb. 12.—A good, old-fashioned "fight" is expected when the education committee of the Ohio Senate goes into session here tonight.

It will be the task of the committee to pass on the bill, introduced by Senator David B. Johnson, Wauseon, which provides for the censorship of "talkie" movies.

This in itself would not provoke a disturbance if it were not for another bill, sponsored by Senator George H. Bender, Cleveland, which seeks to abolish motion picture censorship in Ohio.

Though this second measure does not come up before the committee tonight, Bender is a member of the committee, and like all good legislators, will support his measure, as only Senator Bender knows how.

On the other hand, Senator Johnson is chairman of the same committee and he also will have his "little piece" to recite.

The Wausen Senator points to the ever increasing popularity of the vitaphone as a reason for his bill. Senator Bender's measure is a terse statement, consisting of about 10 words, and simply providing "that motion picture censorship shall be abolished in Ohio." But when he pleads for the endorsement of his bill, one can be assured that the Cleveland hardware dealer will have a goodly number of arguments and an avalanche of oratory up his sleeve. The Senator always has.

Sensor Johnson's bill does not differ in substance from the censorship bill now in effect. It simply provides that the board of film censorship of the state department of education shall also have jurisdiction over "all speeches or spoken lines which are reproduced through the use of mechanical or electrical apparatus, and which form a part of the motion picture drama."

The board of film censorship operates under the department of education. The director of education is the nominal head. John

Clifton, Columbus, now occupies that chair.

FIRE PLUG STOPS SKIDDING MACHINE

After spending the week-end at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Chris Thomas on S. Court-st. L. O. Greiner returned by train to Woodman, Ky., where he is employed by the Sturm & Dillard Construction Co.

The return trip by train was made as the result of an accident Saturday afternoon when Greiner's auto skidded and struck a fire plug near Court and Mill-sts. Both wheels were broken from the auto and fire plug not only made a large hole in the side of the machine, but also penetrated a suitcase. The car was taken to the Schieffelin garage for repairs.

RITES SATURDAY

Funeral rites held Saturday for Mrs. Ada Eisenbrey, who died suddenly at her home in Clarksville, and Mrs. Cary Wilkins, of Frankfort, were largely attended. They were schoolgirls together, departing this life only a few hours apart. Both services were in charge of Metzger & Fisher of Williamsport.

MOTHER IS FINED

COLUMBUS, Feb. 12.—Pleading guilty to charges of illegal possession of liquor in her home and illegal possession of implements, designed for the manufacture of liquor, Mrs. May Bloomfield, mother of 10 children, was fined $200 and costs by Justice A. C. Kuhn, of Bexley.

SAYS NOBLES BACK MEXICAN REVOLT PLOTS

Government Plans Confiscation of Instigator's Property.

MEXICO CITY, Feb. 12.—President Emilio Portes Gil today struck back at the enemies of his government in a scathing, signed statement which is considered one of the most important political documents issued since he assumed the presidency.

Coming close upon the heels of the attempt to assassinate him and members of his family by dynamiting his special train Sunday night, President Portes Gil's statement declares that the real enemies of his regime are not to be found in the church, but are members of Mexico's one-time aristocracy, disinherited by the revolution, who are using the religious conflict as a cloak for their subversive activities.

The present political unrest in Mexico is wholly apart from the difficulties resulting from the church-state conflict, the president declared.

CONFISCATION AHEAD

The statement outlined the stern measures with which the government is prepared to put an end to politically subversive movements. These measures include the confiscation of the property of those convicted of plotting against the government, and the division of that property among the working classes.

Importance is added to the president's statement, as he is presumed to have discussed with the United States ambassador, Dwight W. Morrow the rigid measures contemplated by the government.

"The steps taken by the government," the president's statement sets forth, "shows its complete separation from the religious question, and its respect for the freedom of conscience have only served to exalt the spirits of those who exploit the credulity of the Catholic masses for political purposes, and to give occasion for these masses and their leaders to take sides in favor of crime, which the country condemned and to glorify the criminal."

DENIES PERSECUTION

"Firstly, the government declares that it cannot admit that the conduct of the Catholics results from religious persecution by the government."

"In accordance with the program of the previous government, the restrictive measures have been gradually diminished by the present government until now only church services are under suspension, and it is well known that this suspension has not been ordered by the civil authorities. Nothing now exists to show that the conflict in which the executive offices of the government once played a part still continues."

"The hidden instigators of all the excesses, which we lament, are not even sincere Catholics defending the religion of their ancestors. They are bourgeois who hold existing conditions responsible for their actions, and seek a way to recover those privileges which the Mexican revolution took away from them."

PLOTTERS SOUGHT

"Indubitable proofs of this are contained in the murders of peasants which, to add sarcasm to the crime, are carried out in the name of 'Christ our king,' and also in the decided protection extended by the pseudo-Mexican aristocracy to the Catholic rebels."

"The government believes that economic pressure will be more effective. Above the arm we must look for the brain, and in applying civil action, the government will seize the properties of those who are authors or accomplices, and thus will have the means further to carry on its revolutionary work of handing over new ranches to the peasants, and giving to the workers the factories of those found guilty."

"In both cases the president will see that the seizures are made with complete rectitude in order to avoid the possibility of frauds or the gratification of personal enmities."

"The government wishes also to state that there will not be a single instance in which influence, convenience or friendship will nullify the strict enforcement of the seizure sentences."

Mr. and Mrs. T. O. Gilliland and Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Kuntz, who motored to Florida, have arrived at Miami, and are staying at the Columbus Court Apartment.

20 LONG YEARS OF SUFFERING END- ED BY SPIN-AGO

Noah Bowsher Has Good Appetite and "More Pep" After Using New Tonic
Containing Spinach.

"I had to go to doctors continually seeking relief from a very disordered stomach until I tried Spin-Ago," said Mr. Noah Bowsher when he came to the Mykrantz Pharmacy for his third bottle of Spin-Ago last week. Mr. Bowsher, who now resides at the Main Hotel and is employed by the Midwest Box Co., has lived all his life in Circleville. During the past twenty years Mr. Bowsher has suffered untold agonies arising from a bad digestive system. But that was before he heard of Spin-Ago—he went on to say—

"Those twenty years of misery are not pleasant to recall—Dyspepsia, gas on the stomach and indigestion brought on practically continual sick headache—My appetite was very poor and eating was never a pleasure—Constipation caused me to feel drowsy most of the time—My vitality was so low that many times I was practically unable to get around—Several attacks of acute indigestion made my life miserable—I never knew when the next one was coming—During those twenty years, I was going to doctors all the time and trying one medicine after another—but my troubles didn't end—I had just about given up hope when I heard of Spin-Ago and the wonderful relief it was giving others—At first I thought that it was just another patent medicine and I didn't pay much attention to the claims made for it—But finally, after hearing praise from so many people I decided that it couldn't do any harm to try it. It was sure a lucky decision for me—as my twenty years of suffering were ended by two bottles of Spin-Ago—I can truthfully say that it is better than any medicine I have ever taken because it cured my constipation and put my digestive system in perfect shape—I am not troubled with dyspepsia or gas any more—No more sick headaches arising from these troubles has returned and I have more pep than I have had for twenty years—I enjoy my meals now and my appetite is fine.

"Any medicine that will do this much for me after twenty years of misery can surely help many others to enjoy life—and I want to heartily recommend Spin-Ago to everyone who is troubled with any of my former complaints."

Again Spin-Ago has succeeded where all other medicines failed—simply because it is a tonic based on a practical idea and compounded after years of experiment—Who has never heard that Spinach is a great aid in indigestion, and that it is one of the most valuable foods for purifying the blood? Spin-Ago is based upon concentrated Spinach and for this reason is able to perform what appear to be almost miracles—Fresh, green spinach is dried under great heat until all the moisture has been expelled—The result is a fine dry powder which contains all the valuable properties of spinach and none of the moisture which just increases the bulk of fresh spinach—In other words, it is concentrated spinach a tea-

The meeting was called to order at 2:30 o'clock with the president, Mrs. F. I. Rittenour, presiding. The study chapter on Africa was reviewed by Mrs. Alice Brundige in the absence of Mrs. Ethel Young who was to have been the reviewer. Mrs. Jennie Holden in charge of the Mystery Box made this part of the program very interesting. The meeting closed by all repeating the benediction. The Women's Christian Temperance Union of Salem met Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Flora Shoemaker. The meeting was called to order at two o'clock by the president, Miss Mary Harpster presiding, by all singing "America," followed by the Scripture lesson read by Miss Harpster. After singing "Some Glad Day," the secretary, Mrs. Lillian Hinton, read the minutes of the January meeting. Miss Harpster reported the executive meeting that was held at the U. B. church in Circleville which she attended on Friday, Feb. 1st. The regular Frances E. Willard program was postponed at this time to give the county president, Mrs. Lucy B. Price all the time necessary to explain the plan of work for the year which she did in a most interesting manner. She began her talk by asking us all to repeat the slogan for this year which is "Give Prohibition its Chance, the Liquor Traffic Had Its Day." The meeting closed with a prayer by Mrs. Anna Rice. The committee composed of Mrs. Shoemaker and Mrs. Will Evans served sandwiches, pickles and coffee.

N. J. Dunlap was a business visitor to Chillicothe Thursday.

CORN SUBJECT OF MADISON MEETING

LONDON, O., Feb. 12.—"More bushels of corn per acre, less acres per farm" is the slogan for the corn growers meeting held in the court house here Tuesday.

The meeting was arranged by the Madison-co Extension service, co-operating with the extension service department of the Ohio State University.

This was to be an all-day meeting at which the various phases of corn production were to be discussed. L. G. Wright, county agricultural agent, says that "when a farmer in the county raises 3,000 bushels of corn on 49 acres and his neighbor raises only 3,200 bushels on 165 acres, it would seem that the farmers should study the reason for such a difference in yield per acre, and not the number of acres determining the profit."

HUGS AND KISSES AND CUPID'S BOVS ENTWINED

Dame Rumor (and what a cynic she is!) has it that a Valentine is something somebody brings home to the wife after "sitting up all night with a sick friend." Of course, that's an erroneous idea—any Florist or Confectioner will tell you that.

They will tell you a Valentine is something expressing a four-letter word meaning intense, eternal affection. The Florist will tell you to "Say it with Flowers." The Confectioner will urge you to "Say it with Candy."

Not to be outdone, we modestly adjust our loud speaker, inhale deeply and startle the community by shouting, "SAY IT WITH FURNITURE!"

We have nothing for sale which is framed in lace, decorated with a rose, or imprinted with words reading like a page from Elinor Glyn. But we do have house furnishings which will make the home a better place to live in and the home folks happier folks to live with. And if that isn't enough—just what are you looking for, anyway?

A house full of company and an extra overnight guest? Nothing to worry about if you have a Day-Bed. A beautiful piece of living room furniture by day—a full-sized, comfortable bed at night.

Speaking of guests, real winter comfort is now a permanent guest in the home of Mrs. W. B. Cady. A new Estate Heatrola moved in a few days ago and lost no time in getting the whole house cozy and warm.

Now that hatracks have gone high-brow we have to refer to them as costumers. At any rate, they're a sure cure for those who suffer from the habit of hanging the coat and hat on the chandelier—or worse yet—on the floor. All sizes, and none over $4.50. Speaking of hatracks and costumers, we have just one golden oak hall rack that formerly sold at $25.00. Who can use it for $15.00?

Do not ridicule failure. Without it there would be no such thing as success.

HOMER HANDY'S HINT

A hook on the end of a broom will serve as a hanger and will reach shade cords that have gone beyond reach. In addition it can be used to pull down non-breakable boxes, etc., from high shelves.

Magistrate: "Take your choice, $20 or twenty days."

Prisoner: "Thanks, (hic) I'll honor. I'll take (hic) the money."

Mrs. J. F. English is doing her cooking on a full-featured Estate Gas Range, and we want to see to sell her another cook stove for a good many years to come. An Estate is built for long service and hard usage. All styles and sizes on display.

"It'll be a hot day in February when I substitute an old-fashioned heating stove in place of my Estate Heatrola," says Peter Dumm, 226 Logan-st., one of our ardent Heatrola boosters. And we can name others who would say the same thing.

1st Furniture Clerk: "Lots of girls are getting men's wages these days."

2nd Ditto: "What — are you married, too?"

You should see what we have done to some of our rug prices. After inventory, we found some rugs that had become "stale," although the patterns are good, and we stuck the knife into the prices to move them quickly. There are some real bargains here for folks that are looking for new room-size rugs. Look 'em over.

Grace M. Hay Drummond Hay

Lady Grace Drummond Hay, only woman passenger on the Graf Zeppelin.

"The fact that we were not permitted to smoke from the time the Graf Zeppelin left Friedrichshafen until we landed at Lakehurst only increased my appetite for a Lucky Strike. Oh, how good that first one tasted! I'm really keen for Lucky Strike—the toasted flavor is delightful. I smoke a Lucky instead of eating sweets—that's what many men have been doing for years. I think it high time we women smoked Luckies and kept our figures trim."

GRACE M. HAY DRUMMOND HAY

The modern common sense way—reach for a Lucky instead of a sweet. Everyone is doing it—men keep healthy and fit, women retain a trim figure. Lucky Strike, the finest tobacco, skillfully blended, then toasted to develop a flavor which is a delightful alternative for that craving for fattening sweets.

Toasting frees Lucky Strike from impurities. 20,679 physicians recognize this when they say Luckies are less irritating than other cigarettes. That's why folks say: "It's good to smoke Luckies."

Note: Authorities attribute the enormous increase in Cigarette smoking to the improvement in the process of Cigarette manufacture by the application of heat. It is true that during 1928, Lucky Strike Cigarettes showed a greater increase than all other Cigarettes combined. This surely confirms the public's confidence in the superiority of Lucky Strike.

CORN SUBJECT OF MADISON MEETING
LONDON, O., Feb. 12.—"More bushels of corn per acre, less acres per farm" is the slogan for the corn growers meeting held in the court house here Tuesday.
The meeting was arranged by the Madison-co Extension service, co-operating with the extension service department of the Ohio State University.
This was to be an all-day meeting at which the various phases of corn production were to be discussed. L. G. Wright, county agricultural agent, says that "when a farmer in the county raises 3,000 bushels of corn on 49 acres and his neighbor raises only 3,200 bushels on 165 acres, it would seem that the farmers should study the reason for such a difference in yield per acre and not the number of acres determining the profit."
LICENSE TO WED

So phenomenal has been the success of Donovan and hundreds of others that the publishers have decided to send free copies to men and women who are interested in making the same big money. Underground Waters

The quantity of water underground beneath the crust of the earth's surface is nearly one-third the total volume of the oceanic waters, says a scientist who has just concluded investigations of buried rivers and caves.

The earth's ground water has been accumulating for countless ages, and extends to great depths perhaps six miles, and percolates slowly through the porous and jointed rocks, to form a great system of underground drainage.

HOYT'S COMPOUND WAS WHAT I NEEDED

Declares Well Known Chillicothe Lady: Calls It Wonderful Tonic

Miss Agnes Hester, 101 S. Watt St., Chillicothe, Ohio, is still another well known resident of this vicinity to publicly endorse Hoyt's Compound which is the great natural medicine now being explained to LARGE CROWDS every day here in this city at Wilder's Drug Store. Miss Hester is WIDELY KNOWN to residents of Chillicothe and vicinity, having lived here all her life and being a graduate of South Salem High School. She is now employed as assistant organist at the Sherman theater in Chillicothe. Miss Hester was in need of a good reconstructive tonic as her blood was in a terrible rundown condition and caused pimples to break out all over her face. Her appetite was very poor and stomach continually troubled her. She had tried every different kind of medicine she could hear of for these troubles, with only mediocre results, and when she kept hearing Chillicothe residents praise the Hoyt's Compound she decided to try this great medicine. She purchased six bottles and after taking three, she says that the results were simply wonderful. Miss Hester's own complete statement follows:

"Have lived near Chillicothe all my life and graduated from South Salem High School and am well known to many people throughout this territory," says Miss Hester. "I am now employed as assistant organist at the Sherman theater here in Chillicothe and know that anyone who knows me will verify that I was greatly in need of a reconstructive tonic and blood purifier. My face was continually a mass of pimples, my appetite was very poor, and stomach gave me trouble after every meal. I had tried nearly every kind of medicine, I could hear of for years but with only mediocre results until finally I began hearing so much praise for this Hoyt's Compound from other Ohio residents who had obtained such remarkable results through the use of this famous prescription and decided to try it and see if it would do for me what it had done for many others. I purchased six bottles and now, after taking three of them I can truthfully say that I am hardly able to believe the wonderful results which I have obtained through the use of this great medicine. My entire condition was wonderfully improved. My stomach is in better condition, and I can now eat most anything without these terrible after effects. The pimples have disappeared from my face and I feel like a different person. I cannot say enough in praise for this great medicine for it certainly did wonders for me. I will be only too glad to recommend Hoyt's Compound to anyone who suffers as I did."

Go now to Wilder's Drug Store, Chillicothe, Ohio, and get your Hoyt's. Don't neglect your health another day. — Adv.

UNDEVELOPED WEALTH

About one hundred years ago in the mountains of western North Carolina a silver mine was worked by some Englishmen and their products carried on mules to Wise County, Virginia, where a Mr. Mullens coined it into dollars. About 45 years ago Mullens was arrested and convicted, and the mine abandoned. I found their workings by the aid of a man yet living that worked for them in the same chain of mountains. I found seemingly vast bodies of copper traceable all the way to the famous Ducktown copper mines in Georgia.

I am just an old Quaker preacher, haven't any money but will show the right parties great wealth. Write or see me at 131 Edison Avenue, Circleville, Ohio.

Had analysis made by New York Zinc Co. These minerals are O. K.

Splendid New Stone Tower of Wisdom Proclaimed By Art Critics of World

A skyscraper Cathedral of Learning is rapidly assuming form on the University of Pittsburgh campus. Termed by art critics "the outward and visible sign of an inward and spiritual grace," the edifice is one of the most original and interesting in America.

On a 14-acre quadrangle, the towering stone structure lifts its head 526 feet into the clouds. The base of the cathedral is 225 feet square, but with the wings, it has an overall frontage of 325 feet and a depth of 255 feet. In its ideal location, it will dominate the whole of Pittsburgh's impressive civic center, overlooking the Carnegie library, museum and art galleries, and the present Allegheny University campus. Clustered about the cathedral will be several low buildings. The first to be built will be a library, followed by a chapel and dormitories.

Approximately 250,000 cubic feet of limestone from the quarries of the Indiana Limestone company, of which so many beautiful universities are constructed, are being used in the tower building to carry out the conception of permanence, beauty and perfection which has been the constant aim of the university. Architects the world over have claimed the artistry of the structure to be among the most unique and inspiring achievements of this era. They declare it will live through the ages as an inspiration to those artistically inclined. Charles E. Klauder is the architect.

Instruction in the liberal arts will be given in the lofty building, while the permanent buildings on the old campus will be used by the various professional schools. Class rooms, large lecture rooms, laboratories, departmental libraries and social rooms will be all included. Adequate elevator equipment will be provided. Plans for the group of smaller buildings surrounding the main building have not been completed.

All the Difference

The clock had just struck twelve when Henpeck inserted his latchkey and let himself into his sub urban villa.

His wife was ready for him.

"Where have you been, I'd like to know?" she snapped.

"I—er—er—" began Henpeck, hesitatingly, when he was interrupted.

"Yes, go on I suppose you'll tell me you've been to see a sick friend—holding his hand all the evening?"

"Oh, no, my dear," replied the erring husband sadly. "If I'd been holding his hand, I would have made some money." —Pittsburgh Sun Telegraph

Little Color Variation

Canals seem to be singularly free from the color variations that affect so many domesticated animals—melanism and albinism. Black canals, presumably melanics, are rare. A breed called "Nubian canal" is of a very light shade. This seems to be a regular color strain, however, and not a case of albinism.

A "Firm"

The name "firm," as applied to a business establishment, is from the Latin "firmare" to confirm by signature. Gradually the meaning changed until it meant those who signed business letters—the "firm."

IF LINCOLN WERE WITH US NOW

Impatient Griselda

by Dorothy Scarborough

WHAT HAS HAPPENED SO FAR.

TO Irene Robeline it was a painful duty to sit up at the vigil of Lilith Holden. The story of Lilith's capture of handsome Quinn Holden, young minister of the Texas town, as told by Mattie Anson, village gossip, was like stabs with a knife. Lilith was the prettiest girl in town. Her coquetry didn't stop at the church, but almost before she knew it she had married Holden. A year later, with the birth of a child, Lilith died. Irene's heart ached for Holden, who attempts to care for the infant with the aid of a colored servant. The minister comes to her for advice, never realizing Irene's passion for him. Will Lundy, town doctor, in love with Irene, is equally ignorant of her secret. Even Mattie Anson who, hints that it is time for Irene to marry Lundy, is deceived. But when Lundy asserts his love Irene rejects him and determines the more to win Holden. She learns the care of babies so as to be of help to him, for his whole life is wrapped up in the pretty child, in whom he sees the dead Lilith. More and more the young father seeks Irene's advice about the infant's care. But Abby Whitaker also has her cap set for the young widower. Disension appears in the church ranks when the deacons decide, against Holden's advice, to throw out a drinking member. Irene, discarding modesty, wishes to tell Holden of her love for him, but loses her courage in his presence.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER XII.

Irene stood in the quiet street outside the church for a moment, pained, irresolute, despairing. . . . She knew the nature of the deacons too well to hope that they would change from their position, no matter what the pastor or anyone else said. Where other people had opinions, the deacons held convictions—and held them with the grip of a turtle that won't let go till it thunders. What thunder could impress the deacons?

Her trembling hands held no bolts to hurl. Quinn was going away. . . . She would never see him again, or maybe not for years. "Miss Robeline, this is my wife," he would say to her some day. Some other woman in another church would win his love, would mother his child, would bear him other children. . . .

She put her clenched hand to her lips and gave a little moan. A man was coming toward her so she must move on or she would attract attention. Did she look as desperate as she felt?

She walked on. . . . The sky was clear and blue. How could it be so beautiful when there was such a flaw in the universe—when Quinn was going away—when love and youth and happiness would pass out of her life with him? The air was warm, for it was May again now, but she shivered.

May again, with blossoms everywhere—roses, lilies, larkspur, all the garden flowers. A bright smile smote them suddenly and to her eyes they withered on their stalks. . . . Then the dizziness passed and she saw them bright and brave again. . . . Flowers were for funerals. . . . Just a year ago Lilith was covered with them. Light-hearted Lilith, gay as the dance of a sunbeam, lovely as a bunch of flowering hawthorn. Lilith, who had never loved him, but whom he couldn't forget.

Almost three years she had loved him, suffered this torment, this suspense. Why did love come to her only as an anguish? Other girls loved lightly, forgot easily. But when her soul wrenched from her body at death, wouldn't she, Irene Robeline, be loving Quinn Holden? There were some who didn't forget.

He was so absent-minded in her presence, as if he didn't even see her. If he didn't care at all, if he never was going to, why, why couldn't she stop loving him? Where was her pride? But what had pride to do with love?

She felt curiously remote, cut off from the world. Her senses registered the details about her, but as in a vacuum, as through plate glass, through some impermeable substance that brought no emotional response. She saw on the Wilcox lawn a negro boy cutting grass, his blue-shirted shoulders humped over, saw the fragments of grass flying back from the machine like a green swarm of insects, heard his drowsy song and the spitting whirr of his lawn would escort his girl, that would provide a preponderance of youth at church on Sunday evening. The only young man belonging to the Baptist Church that she didn't see was Will Lundy. He was coming to see her that evening anyhow, and she could talk with him then. But it would not be easy. She was glad to postpone it for even a few hours. What would he think of her?

She dressed in her prettiest dress that evening, a warm yellow that brought out her dusky coloring, arranged her hair in the way she knew Will liked it best, touched it with delicate perfume, and gave fastidious attention to powdering her face. She studied her reflection in the mirror. She didn't need any rouge surely, for her cheeks were like roses—petal pink, petal soft, and her lips were vivid. "Will Lundy will think me—well, at least pretty," she said, with a smile at her mirrored face. "Oh, why can't he?"

As Will's step sounded on the porch, she sped to meet him. She must not see him in the house, but there on the porch where the vine tracery of the shadows could hide her telltale eyes from him. Will Lundy was clever, so clever, but he mustn't learn too much to-night or tomorrow night.

He stood in the light from the doorway, smiling at sight of her, tall, ruddy, his coppery head burnished, his big frame erect as an Indian's.

"My, but you're beautiful to-night, honey girl!" "Am I?" she said, dimpling demurely, and casting down her long dark lashes to hide the wistfulness in her eyes. How cruel for the worlds of love to come from the wrong lips!

"You're like the prairie when the spring flowers are all in bloom. His gray eyes lighted with love as he gazed at her, his two hands holding her slim hands folded together, so they could not escape from his clasp.

He drew her beside him into the shadow of the lacy vines.

"Oh, Irene, can't you love me?" Her hands fluttered away from his like frightened partridges.

"No, no!" she cried. "I'm so sorry."

"But why, but why? I know I'm not good enough for you, but then no man is."

Tears burned her eyes at thought of his pain and her own. "Life is so hard," she faltered.

"Why can't we be happy?" He drew her into his arms and pressed his lips to hers. But she thrust him back.

"Why, Irene?" he begged. She turned to face him, tense, her body rigid, her cheeks hot. "I can't!"

She saw his face in a patch of light, somber, brooding, rebellious, his gray eyes like coals of fire.

"Irene, will you ever know what love means? How it can hurt?" he flung at her with bitterness.

"If I could ever forget!" she cried with bitterness greater than his.

His startled face turned to hers, still in the patch of yellow light. "What do you mean?" he jerked.

She took a step toward him, her body trembling, hot and cold by turns, as if she were physically ill. Her words were wrenched from some awful reserve, as if to speak them would kill her. But she must speak, for Will Lundy's sake.

"I never thought to tell anyone," she cried in a strangled voice. "But you are so good—and I do love you—in every way but—the one!"

She stopped aghast at the look in his face. It was as if molten lava were suddenly frozen by some awful force of nature. There was living agony in the gray eyes that stared down at her.

"What is it, Irene? Tell me—quick!"

"I love Quinn Holden!" she cried sharply. "I do know how love can hurt—nearly kill!"

THEATRES

"THE FOREIGN LEGION"

Norman Kerry, Lewis Stone and June Marlowe are the featured players in "The Foreign Legion," a turbulent picture of the sex, soldiers and strife of the most famous military organization in history, which will be shown at the Grand theater Tuesday and Wednesday. It is a daring drama of brilliant, beautiful flaming Morocco. Fox News will be shown Tuesday. Wednesday an Educational comedy and china for the ladies are on the program.

HISTORICAL FILM

"Napoleon," the superb French motion picture that has startled the whole motion picture industry, distributed in America by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, and produced in Paris by the General Society of Films, is really two screen stories in one, a double value for all who view it.

For "Napoleon," which comes to the Met Theater Wednesday, tells of the youth of Bonaparte and then of the great soldier's rise to fame and power. These life chapters make a steady continuity of absorbing and steadfast interest.

A splendid cast was recruited from all over Europe to make each portrayal vividly realistic. Albert Dieudonne plays Napoleon as he has never been played before and he is assisted by other equally capable players, who combine in their entirety, histrionic worth never before seen in an European picture.

"RESTLESS YOUTH"

"Restless Youth," the Columbia production at the Cliftona theater, marks the return of Norman Trevor to the screen after several months absence on account of illness.

The lack of proper understanding between parents and children is illustrated by Columbia's "Restless Youth," which will be shown at the Cliftona theater on Tuesday and Wednesday. Marceline Day and Ralph Forbes have the leading roles.

WHAT HAS HAPPENED SO FAR

TO Irene Robeline it was a painful duty to sit up at the vigil of Lillith Holden. The story of Lillith's capture of handsome Quinn Holden, young minister of the Texas town, as told by Mattie Anson, village gossip, was like stabs with a knife. Lillith was the prettiest girl in town. Her coquetry didn't stop at the church, but almost before she knew it she had married Holden. A year later, with the birth of a child, Lillith died. Irene's heart aches for Holden, who attempts to care for the infant with the aid of a colored servant. The minister comes to her for advice, never realizing Irene's passion for him. Will Lundy, town doctor, in love with Irene, is equally ignorant of her secret. Even Mattie Anson who hints that it is time for Irene to marry Lundy, is deceived. But when Lundy asserts his love Irene rejects him and determines the more to win Holden. She learns the care of babies so as to be of help to him, for his whole life is wrapped up in the pretty child, in whom he sees the dead Lillith. More and more the young father seeks Irene's advice about the infant's care. But Abby Whitaker also has her cap set for the young widower. Disension appears in the church ranks when the deacons decide against Holden's advice, to throw out a drinking member. Irene, disdaining modesty, wishes to tell Holden of her love for him, but loses her courage in his presence.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER XII.

IRENE stood in the quiet street outside the church for a moment, pained, irresolute, despairing. She knew the nature of the deacons too well to hope that they would change from their position, no matter what the pastor or anyone else said. Where other people had opinions, the deacons held convictions—and held them with the grip of a turtle that won't let go till it thunders. What thunder could impress the deacons?

Her trembling hands held no bolts to hurl. Quinn was going away. She would never see him again, or maybe not for years. "Miss Robeline, this is my wife!" he would say to her some day. Some other woman in another church would win his love, would mother his child, would bear him other children.

She put her clenched hand to her lips and gave a little moan. A man was coming toward her so she must move on or she would attract attention. Did she look as desperate as she felt?

She walked on. The sky was clear and blue. How could it be so beautiful when there was such a flaw in the universe—when Quinn was going away—where love and youth and happiness would pass out of her life with him? The air was warm, for it was May again now, but she shivered.

May again, with blossoms everywhere—roses, lilies, larkspur, all the garden flowers. A blight smote them suddenly and to her eyes they withered on their stalks. Then the dizziness passed and she saw them bright and brave again. . . . Flowers were for funerals. . . . Just a year ago Lillith was covered with them. Lillith, the girl who had been so beautiful, who had never loved him, but whom he couldn't forget.

Almost three years he had loved him, suffered this torment, this suspense. Why did love come to her only as an anguish? Other girls loved lightly, forgot easily. But when her soul wrenched from her body at death, wouldn't she, Irene Robeline, be loving Quinn Holden? There were some who didn't forget.

He was so absent-minded in her presence, as if he didn't even see her. If he didn't care at all, if he was going to, why, why couldn't she stop loving him? Where was her pride? But what had pride to do with love?

She felt curiously remote, cut off from the world. Her senses registered the details about her, but as in a vacuum, as through plate glass, through some imperceptible substance that brought no emotional response. She saw on the Wilcox lawn a negro boy cutting grass, his blue-shirted shoulders humped over, saw the fragments of grass flying back from the machine like a green swarm of insects, heard his creaking song and the spitting whirr of his lawn mower, smelled the fresh-cut grass—but in a dead way, with none of the appreciative thrill which such trifles usually brought her. She saw the rounded green tops of the umbrella China-trees with their straggly blossoms, black and lavender, the fragrance of which recalled the necklaces and bracelets she had made of them in her childhood. Such a joyous little girl so long ago! Would she ever be happy again?

It was as though a girl's happiness could be determined by whether some one man out of all the world liked her looks—or was absent-minded when she was with him. Oh, pride, help, help her to forget!

But pride didn't help. . . . Up the street she saw the chairman of the board of deacons coming, and a sudden mad rage possessed her to think that a man like that, with a mind as narrow as a knife blade, could wreck her happiness. If only she could thwart him in some way! Think! Irene, think! Isn't there something possible?

She passed him with head high and cheeks scarlet with passion. "Hello, Irene."

"How do you do, Mr. Whitaker?"

"Come out to business meeting tomorrow night," he said with his usual look.

"I'll be there," she called back over her shoulder.

Then a little farther on she stopped suddenly. Maybe something might be done yet. Why couldn't she ask the young people to come to the meeting? Pack the convention—outvote the deacons. There were young men and girls in the church, with votes to cast, who never cast them, who never bothered to come to the business meetings of the church because they held impotent resentment against the deacons. Why not round them up?

She couldn't tell the truth about the situation, but she could hint a crisis—could stir their curiosity without trying, at least.

Her pace quickened as she turned toward the business part of town, where the young men would be at their desks and counters on Saturday afternoon, young men who were enthusiastic over Quinn Holden and who had small love for the deacons. She mobilized these reinforcements in her mind. How could she show them the emergency and get their aid?

From office to office, from counter to counter, from feed stores to newspaper desks, from laundries to bakeries, to all sorts of places where young men worked, she went in search of those who were members of the Baptist Church.

"Early—to get a good seat," she reminded each voter.

would escort his girl, that would provide a preponderance of youth at church on Sunday evening. The only young man belonging to the Baptist Church that she didn't see was Will Lundy. He was coming to see her that evening anyhow, and she could talk with him then. But it would not be easy. She was glad to postpone it for even a few hours. What would he think of her?

She dressed in her prettiest dress that evening, a warm yellow that brought out her dusky coloring, arranged her hair in the way she knew Lundy liked it best, touched it with delicate perfume, and gave fastidious attention to powdering her face. She studied her reflection in the mirror. She didn't need any more strictly, for her cheeks were like roses—pink, petal soft and her lips were vivid. "Will Lundy will think me well, at least pretty," she said, with a smile at her mirrored face. "Oh, why can't he?"

As Will's step sounded on the porch, she sped to meet him. She must not see Lundy in the house, but there on the porch where the vine tracery of the shadows could hide her telltale eyes from him. Will Lundy was clever, so clever, but he mustn't learn too much tonight or tomorrow night.

He stood in the light from the doorway, smiling at sight of her, tall, ruddy, his coppery head burnished, his big frame erect as an Indian's.

"My, but you're beautiful tonight, honey girl!"

"Am I?" she said, dimpling demurely, and casting down her long dark lashes to hide the wistfulness in her eyes. How cruel for the worlds of love to come from the wrong lips!

"You're like the prairie when the spring flowers are all in bloom." His gray eyes lighted with love as he gazed at her, his two hands holding her slim hands folded together so they could not escape from his clasp.

He drew her beside him into the shadow of the back vines. "Oh, Irene, can't you love me?" Her hands fluttered away from his like frightened partridges. "No, no," she cried. "I'm so sorry."

"But why, but why? I know I'm not good enough for you, but then no man is."

Tears burned her eyes at thought of his pain and his own. "I'm so hard," she faltered. "Why can't we be happy?"

He drew her into his arms and pressed his lips to hers. But she thrust him back. "Why, Irene?" he begged. She turned to face him, tense, her body rigid, her cheeks hot. "I can't!"

She saw his face in a patch of light, somber, brooding, rebellious, his gray eyes like coals of fire. "Irene, will you ever know what love means? How it can hurt?" he flung at her with bitterness.

"If I could ever forget!" she cried with bitterness greater than his.

His startled face turned to hers, all in the patch of yellow light. "What do you mean?" he jerked. She took a step toward him, her body trembling, hot and cold by turns, as if she were physically ill. Her words were wrenched from some awful reserve, as if to speak them would kill her. But she must speak, for Will Lundy's sake.

"I never thought to tell any one," she cried in a strangled voice. "But you are so good—and I do love you—in every way but—the one!"

She stopped aghast at the look in his face. It was as if molten lava were suddenly frozen by some awful force of nature. There was living agony in the gray eyes that stared down at her.

"What is it, Irene? Tell me—quick!"

"I love Quinn Holden!" she cried, sharply. "I do know how love can hurt—nearly kill!"

THEATRES

"THE FOREIGN LEGION"

Norman Kerry, Lewis Stone and June Marlowe are the featured players in "The Foreign Legion," a turbulent picture of the sex, soldiers and strife of the most famous military organization in history, which will be shown at the Grand theater Tuesday and Wednesday. It is a daring drama of brilliant, beautiful flaming Morocco. Fox News will be shown Tuesday, Wednesday an Educational comedy and china for the ladies are on the program.

HISTORICAL FILM

"Napoleon," the superb French motion picture that has startled the whole motion picture industry, distributed in America by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, and produced in Paris by the General Society of Films, is really two screen stories in one, a double value for all who view it. For "Napoleon," which comes to the Met Theater Wednesday, tells of the youth of Bonaparte and then of the great soldier's rise to fame and power. These life chapters make a steady continuity of absorbing and steady interest.

A splendid cast was recruited from all over Europe to make each portrayal vividly realistic. Albert Dieudonne plays Napoleon as he has never been played before and he is assisted by other equally capable players, who combine in their entirety, histrionic worth never before seen in an European picture.

"RESTLESS YOUTH"

"Restless Youth," the Columbia production at the Cliftona theater, marks the return of Norman Trevor to the screen after several months absence on account of illness.

The lack of proper understanding between parents and children is illustrated by Columbia's "Restless Youth," which will be shown at the Cliftona theater on Tuesday and Wednesday. Marceline Day and Ralph Forbes have the leading roles.

Underground Waters

The quantity of water underground beneath the crust of the earth's surface is nearly one-third the total volume of the oceanic waters, says a scientist who has just concluded investigations of buried rivers and caves.

The earth's ground water has been accumulating for countless ages, and extends to great depths, perhaps six miles, and percolates slowly through the porous and jointed rocks, to form a great system of underground drainage.

Declares Well Known Chillicothe Lady: Calls It Wonderful Tonic

city at Wilder's Drug Store. Miss Hester is WIDELY KNOWN to residents of Chillicothe and vicinity, having lived here all her life and being a graduate of South Salem High School. She is now employed as assistant organist at the Sherman theater in Chillicothe. Miss Hester was in need of a good reconstructive tonic as her blood was in a terrible run-down condition and caused pimples to break out all over her face. Her appetite was very poor and stomach continually troubled her. She had tried every different kind of medicine she could hear of for these troubles, with only mediocre results, and when she kept hearing Chillicothe residents praise the Hoyt's Compound she decided to try this great medicine. She purchased six bottles and after taking three of them says that the results were simply wonderful. Miss Hester's own complete statement follows:

"Have lived near Chillicothe all my life and graduated from South Salem High School and am well known to many people throughout this territory," says Miss Hester. "I am now employed as assistant organist at the Sherman theater here in Chillicothe and know that anyone who knows me will verify that I was greatly in need of a reconstructive tonic and blood purifier. My face was continually a mass of pimples, my appetite was very poor, and stomach gave me trouble after every meal. I had tried nearly every kind of medicine I could hear of for years but with only mediocre results until finally I began hearing so much praise for this Hoyt's Compound from other Ohio residents who had obtained such remarkable results through the use of this famous prescription and decided to try it and see if it would do for me what it had done for many others. I purchased six bottles and now after taking three of them I can truthfully say that I am hardly able to believe the wonderful results which I have obtained through the use of this great medicine. My entire condition was wonderfully improved. My stomach is in better condition, and I can now eat most anything without these terrible after effects. The pimples have disappeared from my face and I feel like a different person. I cannot say enough in praise for this great medicine for it certainly did wonders for me. I will be only too glad to recommend Hoyt's Compound to anyone who suffers as I did."

Go now to Wilder's Drug Store, Circleville, Ohio, and get your Hoyt's. Don't neglect your health another day.—Adv.

UNDEVELOPED WEALTH

About one hundred years ago in the mountains of western North Carolina a silver mine was worked by some Englishmen and their products carried on mules to Wise County, Virginia, where a Mr. Mullens coined it into dollars. About 45 years ago Mullens was arrested and convicted and the mine abandoned. I found their workings by the aid of a man yet living that worked for them. In the same chain of mountains I found seemingly vast bodies of copper traceable all the way to the famous Ducktown copper mines in Georgia.

I am just an old Quaker preacher, haven't any money but will show the right parties great wealth. Write or see me at 131 Edison Avenue, Circleville, Ohio.

Had analysis made by New York Zinc Co. These minerals are O. K.

Splendid New Stone Tower of Wisdom Proclaimed By Art Critics of World

A skyscraper Cathedral of Learning is rapidly assuming form on the University of Pittsburgh campus. Termed by art critics "the outward and visible sign of an inward and spiritual grace," the edifice is one of the most original and interesting in America.

On a 14-acre quadrangle, the towering stone structure lifts its head 536 feet into the clouds. The base of the cathedral is 225 feet square, but with the wings, it has an overall frontage of 325 feet and a depth of 255 feet. In its ideal location, it will dominate the whole of Pittsburgh's impressive civic center, overlooking the Carnegie library, museum and art galleries, and the present Hillside University campus. Clustered about the cathedral will be several low buildings. The first to be built will be a library, followed by a chapel and dormitories. Approximately 250,000 cubic feet of limestone from the quarries of the Indiana Limestone company, of which so many beautiful universities are constructed, are being used in the tower building to carry out the conception of permanence, beauty and perfection which has been the constant aim of the university. Architects the world over have proclaimed the artistry of the structure to be among the most unique and imposing achievements of this era. They declare it will live through the ages an inspiration to those artistically inclined. Charles E. Klauder is the architect.

Instruction in the liberal arts will be given in the lofty building, while the permanent buildings on the old campus will be used by the various professional schools. Class rooms, large lecture rooms, laboratories, departmental libraries and social rooms will be all included. Adequate elevator equipment will be provided. Plans for the group of smaller buildings surrounding the main building have not been completed.

All the Difference

The clock had just struck twelve when Henpeck inserted his latch-key and let himself into his suburban villa.

His wife was ready for him.

"Where have you been, I'd like to know?" she snapped.

"I—er—er—" began Henpeck hesitatingly, when he was interrupted.

"Yes, go on, I suppose you'll tell me you've been to see a sick friend—holding his hand all the evening?"

"Oh, no, my dear," replied the erring husband sadly. "If I'd been holding his hand, I would have made some money."—Pittsburgh Sun Telegraph.

Little Color Variation

Camels seem to be singularly free from the color variations that affect so many domesticated animals—melanism and albinism. Black camels, presumably melanics, are rare. A breed called "Nubian camel" is of a very light shade. This seems to be a regular color strain, however, and not a case of albinism.

6 Tables Play At Red Cross Benefit At Memorial Hall

More than 200 card enthusiasts turned out Monday night for the Red Cross benefit card party at the Memorial hall. Including the proceeds from the sale of candy, the money cleared amounted to $126. It was one of the most successful parties of its kind.

As the guests entered the door, they received numbers from Charles Beck or Joseph Lynch. These numbers were used later in selecting the winner of the door prize. The tables were marked by red cross flags.

When all the guests were seated Joe Lynch, as master of ceremonies, called for attention, and explained the card rules for the evening and the awarding of the 26 prizes. He also thanked the guests for their presence at the function.

The games then proceeded for five rounds, with members of the committee recording the scores on the tallies with red and blue pencils.

During the play, the number for the door prize was drawn, and Mrs. Harley Colwell was the lucky winner of the luscious looking white frosted cake. Also during the evening candy was sold among the players for the benefit of the red cross.

The tables of players were crowded together, but not uncomfortably and many parties of two and three tables progressed for the five rounds. After the fifth game, high scores from all the tables were collected by the committee, and these checked and arranged in proper sequence. The entire affair was in able hands who quickly accomplished the very difficult task of naming the winners. These were called in order, first prizes for bridge, 500, and euchre for the ladies and then the same for the men, and down until all prizes had been claimed. Each winner went to the front of the room and selected his prize from the table where they were displayed.

There were more prizes for bridge, because by a large majority there were more bridge games being played.

The awarding of the prizes was only one of the evening's pleasures, for everyone enjoyed the sociability there, and the opportunity of seeing others in their special club or group.

Socially, as much as financially the party was most successful. The credit is given to the committee in charge of Mrs. Orion King, chairman and Mrs. Arthur Wiegand, assistant chairman. Other members of the committee were Mrs. Glenn Nickerson, Mrs. H. D. Jackson, Mrs. B. T. Hedges, Miss Agnes Butch, Joe Lynch, Robert Young, Charles Beck, Edward C. Ebert, Bryce Briggs and Miss Anna Florence.

This committee and the entire Red Cross Chapter is grateful for a great many donations for prizes and other gifts, and especially to O. D. Mader, Hamilton and Ryan, W. J. Weaver and Son, Stocklen's Grocery, H. B. Colwell, Wittich's Confectionery, Barrere and Nickerson, George Grand-Girard, F. K. Brunner, E. Friedman and Sons, J. Miller and Son, N. G. and W. G. Hamilton, Christ Department Store, Colvill and Jeffries, Beck Brothers, Mrs. C. K. Hunsicker, Mrs. William Creed, Mrs. G. P. Foresman, Mrs. Hervey Swoyer, Miss Anna Florence, Miss Agnes Butch, Mrs. A. M. Weigand, Mrs. B. T. Hedges, Mrs. H. D. Jackson, Joe M. Lynch, Mrs. Glenn Nickerson, Robert Young, Harvey Stevenson and Mrs. Orin King.

The first prizes for bridge were won by Mrs. Samuel Orr, and W. C. McWilliams and the second by Mrs. H. P. Polson and A. W. Wilder. In 500 Miss Helen Wittich and John Bogs were the first prize winners. The second 500 prizes went to Mrs. R. R. Bales and Mr. H. Horsley. The euchre trophy was received by Mrs. Floyd James, New Holland. Other prize winners were Mrs. Bertha Horsley, Miss Lucile Neuding, Mrs. C. K. Clapp, Mrs. Neale Phillips, Mrs. Francis McQuay, Mrs. Turney Veldon, Mrs. L. B. James and Miss Allison Delaplaine, Dr. H. D. Jackson, Frank Hamilton, George H. Fickard, F. R. Caldwell, Charlie T. Gilmore, Art Buyer and W. G. Hamilton, C. K. Hunsicker and Dr. G. D. Phillips.

The Committee and the Red Cross as a whole appreciated the manner in which the residents responded, and are grateful to all who in any way helped with the party, which was a big undertaking and which was successful only because friends of the Red Cross attended.

Her Hair Fairly SPARKLES Now!

The woman who knows what to do after waving her hair doesn't fear the heat of hot irons. Nor of frequent washings. A few drops of Danderine on comb or towel—and the hair is soft and lustrous, and behaves beautifully.

A bit of Danderine rubbed lightly into the scalp, is the one sure way to dissolve every particle of dandruff. But a few drops more make a dressing that is simply marvelous. A sheen that galls brilliantine, and no grease! Any permanent wave or water wave lasts much longer, and looks much neater when Danderine is used instead of water, to "set" the wave.
